Jura is an island about 25 miles long, separated from the coast of Argyll by the Sound of Jura. The journey along this narrow strait is a fine experience, the long rugged coast line with its background of desolate hills giving an impression of human loneliness almost unsurpassed on the coast of the British Isles. The prominent heights are the Paps of Jura (2,569 feet), Glas Beinn (1,839 feet), and Dubh Beinn (1,737 feet), all in the south of the Island.
